Dear << Test First Name >>,

In 2021 Robinson Helicopter saw a significant increase in aircraft sales, more than 450 confirmed orders, the highest the company has seen since 2011. For the first time, R66 orders surpassed Robinson's long standing top seller, the R44 Raven II. "We are pleased to see stronger sales particularly with the R66 which has clearly proven itself as a market leader," said President Kurt Robinson noting that while sales were strong, production was a challenge. "Although overall production for 2021 was better than 2020, we fell short of our target. Our number one focus for 2022 is to put the pandemic behind us and to increase aircraft production and deliveries."

FAA and HAI Visit RHC

In December, RHC President Kurt Robinson (left) welcomed Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) Director Steve Dickson (center), and Helicopter Association International (HAI) President/CEO James Viola (right) to the Robinson factory. Dickson, a staunch advocate for safety, was appointed the administrator of the FAA in 2019. Viola previously served as a Senior Executive for the FAA's Department of Aviation Safety. Both men were interested in the safety enhancements Robinson has implemented including the EMU, autopilot/SAS, and cockpit video camera.

Dealer Highlight - Alpha Aviation

Alpha Aviation (Tokyo, Japan) has been a Robinson dealer and flight school since 1988. Owned and operated by husband and wife team Kenji and Shizuka Saito, Alpha's emphasis on safety has paid off as the company has never had a single reported accident. In addition to their day-to-day responsibilities, the couple creates and produces an original television program that is broadcast in Kanto Koshinetsu. The program promotes general aviation using Robinson helicopters. According to Shizuka, a common perception amongst Japanese people is helicopters are for military use. The TV show has helped to change public perception, encouraging people to learn to fly and increasing the demand for private, affordable helicopters.

Heliflite Australia Donates R22 to the Stockman's Hall of Fame

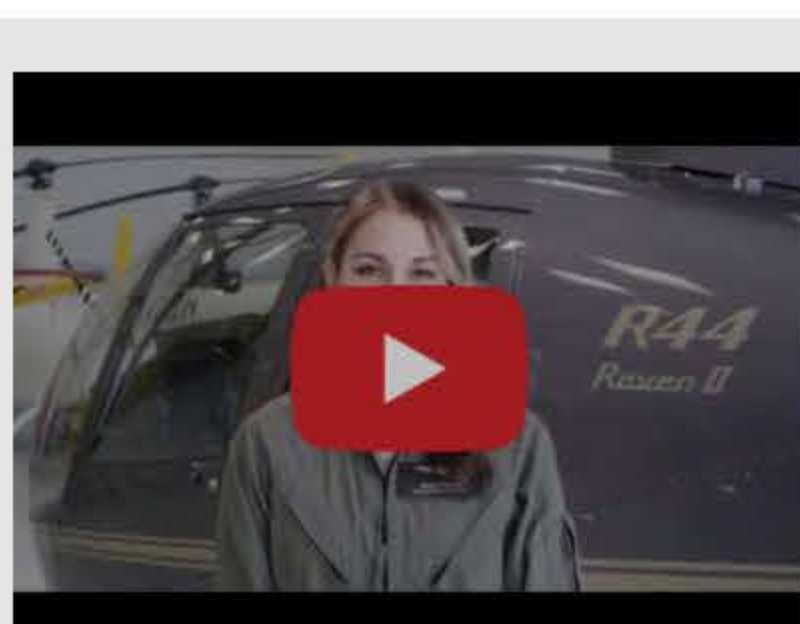

Robinson dealer, Heliflite Pty Ltd, is donating refurbished Robinson R22 SN 1234, (manufactured in 1989) to the Australian Stockman's Hall of Fame & Outback Heritage Centre (ASHOF) based in Longreach, Queensland. The donation is in recognition of the groundbreaking role the two-seater helicopter played in changing mustering operations. "For many years this iconic aircraft has been an essential tool for the men and women working the land," said Lloyd Mills, CEO of the ASHOF.
